All Of The Above

One day out of total frustration I asked my sponsor: What is it you want me to do? Go to more meetings? Build up my career? Spend more time with my kids, my wife, my brothers and sisters, or my sponsee's? Focus all my time on helping others? Work out? Relax and enjoy the fun things in life? Please, just tell me the one thing that I am supposed to do, I thought, and I will do it better than you can imagine! He answered: "Do some of all of the above." no! I thought. Please don't say that. How much is the right amount? When do I stop one thing and start another?

Now that I have been sober for many years, is it okay to miss a meeting if my family needs me to do something for them? If I'm asked to run a project at work, is it okay if I work 18 hours a day until it is done? How much golf should I play? The day I played 61 holes and wanted to play "just one more hole" before the sun set—was that okay? If I'm working out for the 10th day in a row and a sponsee calls, should I tell him I'm busy? After my 17th day on vacation, should I call work and tell them I'm resigning since this vacation thing is really feeling good? With this kind of thinking, it makes me laugh when I hear someone say at a meeting, "I just wanted to have a couple of drinks and not get into trouble." That's one thought I never had! The few times I have pondered relapse in my sobriety—usually when things are not going my way— have me going to the liquor store and buying all the liquor they have, and then getting all the drugs I can get and drinking or taking them all till there are no more left. That's how I am wired—black and white; all or nothing.

So as I have gone through the journey of sobriety, I have learned to accept my makeup and understand that what I need to do is rather simple, although not easy: First, give up totally all those things that are harmful to my goal of being happy, joyous and free, such as gambling, nicotine, or, most importantly, alcohol, including food with even a bit of alcohol in the recipe. The reason is clear: If I do just a little, I am going to do it until there is no more or until I die.

Now the difficult part: How about all of those things that are good for me and a normal part of a full, productive and happy life? The Big Book and wisdom from the Fellowship of AA clearly tell me that once I am out of the grips of my alcoholic compulsion and have a solid foundation in AA, I can and should fully reengage back into the reality of my world.

How do I do this? How much of each thing? Any specific instructions? no. Instead, the direction comes from the spiritual awakening I have as "the result of these Steps," sponsors I can ask how they know "when enough is enough," meetings where I can share my thoughts and questions and get the opinions of others and the guidance from that "small still voice of my Higher Power" who whispers to me (when the channel is clear and I am willing to listen): "Okay, Rick, that's enough, time to move on to something else."

Balance is a difficult thing for everyone, certainly for alcoholics. I will never get it exactly right, since the world in general, and my place in it, change on a daily basis. However, I know this: With the program and my God, I have been given tools, which I never had while I was drinking, that give me a chance to live a full and happy, balanced life. Could I ask for more?

Practice Makes Progress

ON A SATURDAY night in January 1943, I was drunk as a hoot owl, as usual. The next evening, my sponsor took me to my first AA meeting, on 24th Street in New York City. I remember little of it--my mind was foggy, my eyes swollen nearly closed--but I do remember some people getting up and telling about their drinking out loud, in front of all those other people! I had known that I had the problem for a long time, although I didn't know the word "alcoholic." But admit it to another person? I'd die first, I thought, even though I had been drunk almost every day for years, and for years had been trying every day to quit, and felt desperate and hopeless inside. But I knew they were talking sense, and I knew I felt at home for perhaps the first time in my life while sober.

A miracle happened to me that night. Although I didn't know it then, I had had my last drink. What I had tried to do for so long on willpower, and had always failed to do, happened without any willpower at all. For the next dozen years, I was very active in AA in every way I could think of, and that included trying to learn and practice the AA philosophy. The results were not at all unusual. I changed slowly from atheist to deep believer. I was in the wrong business for me--one I disliked, drunk or sober--but I made the best adjustment I could, and it prospered modestly. We paid off our sizable debts, bought and paid for our home, started to save some money, and put four kids through college.

Now, twenty-six years after that first meeting, our kids have grown, we have eight grandchildren, and we have retired. So today I am pausing to look back--something I seldom do, since AA taught me not to. My first few weeks in AA were all confusion. I changed my mind so often, I began to think I was weak-minded. But hope started to glimmer again. My sponsor introduced me to members who had been sober from two days to two months. I had been a daily drinker, so two months of sobriety seemed like the other end of eternity. Still, it did not seem impossible. Then he introduced me to another member, along with the information that he had been sober for two years. That sank in slowly. As comprehension dawned, so did skepticism and then outright disbelief. Nobody could stay sober for two years! My own record was about one week. But time flew along, what with meetings and lunches and Twelfth Step calls, hospital visits and new members. Weeks turned into months and years; but, remembering my own skepticism, I tried never to mention the length of my sobriety to newcomers. Even when asked directly, I tried to duck with something like "Long enough to be sober and happy" or "Time doesn't matter."

But, in a sense, time does matter in AA. That is, it matters how time is used. As long as time is used for "practicing these principles in all our affairs," we can be sober and happy, whether we have been in AA twenty-six days or twenty-six years. AA is a school where we learn how to think and live, where we can turn ourselves into people who don't have to drink. As in any other school, those who try hard and apply themselves make the grade, and the goof-offs don't. Anyhow, that's what I think. (Of course, I realize that, as the Big Book says, "There are those who are constitutionally incapable. . .") As I look back, I realize how fortunate I have been in AA. For instance, I've never had a doubt about being an alky --the reservation that has caused so much trouble for so many. I knew I was a drunk before I ever heard of AA.

Nor have I ever had any doubts about the truth and efficacy of AA, the Twelve Steps, the Big Book, and the AA philosophy in general. I have always believed in them absolutely, and do today. I know that all I have to do is put into practice what I have learned. How well I have done so is another matter. Once, after working very hard at AA for a couple of years when I was new, I decided to take a vacation from business, AA, and everything else. We went away, and I had no contact with AA for three weeks. At the end of that time, I felt the lack--not seriously or dangerously, but I knew my thinking had deteriorated. Resentments were nearer the surface; I felt like having my own way; I made excuses for myself; nervousness increased; it was harder to concentrate or meditate. We had a good vacation, and I doubt that my mental setback showed; but I knew about it and could hardly wait to get to a meeting when we returned home.

When our little daughter started taking piano lessons, every day she would practice scales and exercises. Neither she nor we were ever conscious that she was making any progress from one day to the next. It always sounded just as it had the day before. But progress was taking place, even though we were not aware of it. Ten years later, she could sit at the keyboard and play any piece of music you put in front of her. I doubt that anyone is aware of day-to-day progress in AA, but practice brings it about just the same.

Practice. That's the word and that's what I believe in. It makes seemingly impossible things come true. The more you practice anything, the better your performance; but keeping up the practice every day is a tough job. I've been trying to do it for a quarter of a century now, and I can't tell you how many times I've tried and failed--or forgot to try and therefore failed--and tried again and remembered more often and succeeded a little better.

Every time I succeeded in being a little less self-centered, in reducing resentments, in not feeling sorry for myself, every time I asked for guidance and put my will and my life in God's hands, my stock went up a little. And when I didn't, it went down. But the end is an infinity away. Once upon a time, in my drinking days, I knew that I was just about perfect in every way. Now I can see that a lifetime of effort will be only a beginning--but such a happy one!

Growing With AA

I CAME to Alcoholics Anonymous to get sober. For me it was a long and difficult task. . . chiefly because I chose to make it so. In AA we have twelve suggested steps which lead to a new way of life.

This new way of life does not include alcohol.

For a solid year I attended meetings and stayed sober. It was just as tough an assignment as it had been in previous times to go on the wagon. Then of course I got drunk, but was fortunate enough to have been given a second chance. This time admitting without reservation that I was beaten, I rather reluctantly attempted to do what I know now to be the only thing that will give us a measure of success in AA. I gave some thought to the Twelve Steps and attempted to work at them as best I could.

I wonder how many came to AA as I did. . . thinking, "There's nothing wrong with me that a couple of thousand dollars won't fix." This program and these Twelve Steps, just a lot of nonsense. Maybe these other people need that stuff, but not me. I came here to get sober. And being sober took on a "so what" attitude when my wife would dare to question my lack of interest in the program.

To a new member in AA I would say never underestimate the importance of the Twelve Steps. Remove them and you remove Alcoholics Anonymous. Without them you may get sober, as I did, but I venture to say you cannot stay sober.

And so it is that during our first few months or couple of years in AA we are fully occupied with the all-important task of moulding these Twelve Steps into our everyday living; until staying sober, of itself, becomes reasonably simple; simple only because of a child-like faith we have acquired in our God as we understand Him. And here, of course, is nothing more or less than the pleasant experience of the growth of AA within us.

Having grown to this point, where do we go from here? How many times have we heard that there is "no standing still in AA." The price of sobriety is eternal vigilance plus a deep-seated feeling of gratitude.

New Frontiers

How better then can we express our gratitude than by continuing to grow in this fellowship?

How better can we grow than to carry the message to those who still suffer?

How better can we carry the message than to interest ourselves in our Traditions and our General Services?

How many of us in AA, the writer included, leave the numerous and arduous tasks of keeping our AA ship on an even keel to a handful of members who never say no. . .and then continually criticize them for their efforts? I feel certain that there are a sufficient number of alcoholics still suffering; that there is a lot of work for all of us. In attending meetings in my own area very rarely do I see those members who were so active when I first came to AA. These people were at that time responsible for bringing me back to another and yet another meeting, responsible merely because of their presence there. How invaluable is the power of example!

As I write this piece, our representatives to the General Service Conference are meeting in New York. I pray they are guided in their decisions, by the words of our own AA Prayer:

God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change; courage to change the things I can; and wisdom to know the difference.

Here we can continue to grow in AA by playing our own small part in the practice of our Traditions, and in the expansion of our General Services.

Our General Services can only be as successful as our smallest groups and our smallest groups can only be as successful as their individual members. So we grow in AA by simply being a good and active member of the group to which we belong, being careful of course not to graduate to the stage of a "one-grouper," if possible.

I see the necessity of well-experienced AA members being chosen as our trusted leaders. And in choosing these leaders great care should be exercised lest a personality be confused with a principle.

No member should be chosen or elected to office simply because "the job will do him good." AA as a whole is much more important than any individual member.

Those of us who are enjoying our sobriety today are doing so only because of the efforts of those who came to AA yesterday. Those who are to enjoy their sobriety tomorrow will do so only by the efforts of those who are here today; and those who are here today are--you and I.

Let me ask myself these questions. Have I a smug attitude toward my own sobriety? Am I so self-satisfied that I have completely forgotten how fortunate I was to have been directed to AA in the first place? Have I forgotten that I can retain this new way of life only by sharing it with others?

These and many more such questions will stimulate the growth of AA within us, and so far as I am personally concerned, there is not one suggestion in all the AA literature I have read that I can afford to overlook.

Work at this AA program; think about this AA program--and I believe we will grow even unknown to ourselves.
