THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE NEWSLETTER FOR ALL A.A. MEMBERS OF WESTERN NEW YORK AND THE NIAGARA FRONTIER
We request that this newsletter be kept within the Fellowship to insure anonymity.

WHATS OUR MESSAGE

What did I hear when I first came to AA?

You have a disease that an incurable.

The disease will progress and lead you to jail, mental institutions or death.

We stay sober one day at a time.

We should join a home group and get a sponsor.

We must do the 12 steps.

We must find a relationship with a Higher Power.

We must get involved in service to others.

Bill W. told us that we have a daily reprieve based upon our spiritual condition.

Why did Bill W. and the early members of AA tell us, we need to serve others?

When I focus on myself everything about me is magnified. I weigh everything from my point of view. I judge my disease based on my feelings. I judge acts and comments by others as to how they affect me. I judge fairness on how I'm treated. I'm so self-centered that I judge the whole world on how I feel and think at any given moment.

Early AA members suggested we serve others so we can take the focus off ourselves.

Kevin N., Jim W. and myself ran the 9:00 speaker meeting at the MICA unit in Buffalo General Hospital. During the meeting I'm reminded of my last days of drinking. I focus on the lessons learned while doing the 12 steps. I'm reminded of the importance of knowing that I need help and can't do it alone. I realize the necessity of going to meetings and participating when asked to take on a job. As the three of us drive home together we always seem to focus on our gratitude to God and AA for all that we have received.

I don't recall meeting Leo S. but I was told that he considered it an honor anytime God placed a still suffering alcoholic in his path. Leo never concerned himself with how this person got here. His only concern was to share his story of recovery in hopes that the God would open up this persons mind and bring him to the conclusion that he also suffered from a disease called alcoholism.

We all hope and pray that this will be the time that they recognize the need for help and decide to come to AA.

Don H., Amherst Snyder Group; Written in the early '70's

Complacency Is Insidious

The older, more experienced members of A.A. tell us that complacency is one of the greatest single enemies of sobriety, and that once started, it progresses as rapidly and insidiously as alcoholism itself. Very often, unfortunately, complacency first takes root in the non-alcoholic mate. I'd like to try to bring out how easily complacency can steal upon us; how once it gets a foothold, it changes our entire mental attitude, not only toward the alcoholic, but toward A.A. itself; the havoc complacency brings in its wake; and finally, what measures we can take to guard against it.

Which class of non-alcoholic wife is liable to become infected with complacency? Certainly not the wife whose husband is new to A.A., nor the wife whose husband has had repeated trouble in trying to get the Program. Generally, it's the wife whose husband has managed to roll up a substantial period of sobriety behind him. Yes, perversely enough, it is ourselves, the lucky wives, who stand in most danger of complacency. And it all can happen quite simply!

As the first year or two of sobriety roll along, we know that certain changes take place in the habits and temperament of the problem drinker. It is our job, as non-alcoholic wives, to adjust ourselves happily and safely to these changes. When the pressure of worry from drink has been removed for a considerable period of time, we are immeasurably relieved and delighted. We are grateful to the Higher Power, to A.A., and to our husbands! That awful feeling of insecurity has been replaced by a new and wonderful feeling of confidence. These reactions are natural, just, and right. They are the first tangible results of the A.A. Program in action.

Right here, at this psychological point, our defenses must go up! We must guard ourselves carefully, for unless we do, our confidence might easily become over-confidence. This is a hairline distinction, I know, but the right selection of attitude here might mean the difference to us between continued sobriety for our husbands, or complete disintegration of everything we've achieved thus far!

The early marks of over-confidence, or complacency, are pretty obvious to all but the woman afflicted. The older wives simply quake in their boots when they hear the complacent wife suddenly begin to complain about everything and anything in A.A. . . . The speakers bore her, the meetings are too long, the seats are too hard, the people she meets there are dull and uninteresting. . . . The older wives step in here and attempt to readjust her perspective. Sometimes we find it useless to remind this wife that a year or so ago she was begging for help from A.A.; that she'd have sat on a picket fence, if that would have gained her husband's sobriety; that the speakers are in no way concerned with her entertainment; and finally, that there's a little thing, called gratitude to A.A., which is best expressed by helping others!

Complacency, like alcoholism, progresses swiftly. In no time at all, the complaining wife is missing open meetings on any pretext whatsoever. In her mind she is planning a new life. Now, at long last, she is going to do the thing she always wanted to do, but couldn't because of her husband's drinking. In this new life, there's little, if any place for A.A. Oh, of course, she assures herself, we'll go to meetings now and then, just to be on the safe side.

At this stage, the complacent wife has not only withdrawn in spirit from A.A., but, perhaps to soothe her conscience, she has become openly critical of it. And worse than that, she begins to criticize her husband for the amount of time he still spends on A.A. activity.

The result of such an attitude is pretty disastrous, whichever effect she has on her husband. If he catches complacency from her, he's on the way out, and no one here today needs a crystal ball to forecast the future of that twosome! If, on the other hand, he is shocked, confused, and hurt by this sudden change of attitude; if her constant criticism gets him so low that discouragement sets in, his sobriety may be lost. If, however, he is strong enough to maintain his sobriety despite the domestic crisis, he reminds himself grimly that no one or nothing is going to stand in the way of his recovery. He redoubles his efforts at A.A. because he has to, with the result that more and more time is spent away from the home.

His wife thinks he's doing this just to be nasty, so quarrels, misunderstandings, and sullen silences take the place of the peace and contentment they should both be sharing as a result of his prolonged sobriety. A wedge is driven between this couple, a wedge so wide and deep that it's felt the rest of their lives!

All of these things can happen, do happen, and have happened as a result of complacency in the non-alcoholic wife. Certainly none of us in our right mind ever want to see our husbands return to drinking again. How then can we guard ourselves against complacency?

Simply by hearing, believing, and accepting the words of the older, experienced members of A.A., who have maintained years of sound sobriety. How often have we heard them state from the platform: "If I am going to maintain my sobriety, I must be ever vigilant; I must never relax my guard; I must never take my sobriety for granted; I must never become complacent."

If these members feel that way about their sobriety, dare we, the non-alcoholic wives feel differently? Dare we become complacent? No. Rather, when we first experience that new and wonderful feeling of confidence, let's cherish and enjoy it to the fullest. But at the same time, in gratitude for the gifts received, let's turn to the newer non-alcoholic wife and try to give her some of our warmth, and hope, and comfort. For only when we give unselfishly and fully all we have received is the magic circle of A.A. complete; that magic, safe, and charmed circle wherein we wish to spend the rest of our lives!

Why should we wish to leave this circle? Here we acquire that richness of spirit, which only comes from helping others; here, with our best and truest friends we safeguard our husband's sobriety; and here, we really find the golden treasure which all men seek--contentment and peace of mind!

A Tenth Step Prayer

I pray I may continue: to grow in understanding and effectiveness; to take daily spot check inventories of myself; to correct mistakes when I make them; to take responsibility for my actions; to be ever aware of my negative and self-defeating attitudes and behaviors; to keep my willfulness in check; to always remember I need your help; to keep love and tolerance of others as my code; and to continue asking in daily prayer how I can best serve you, my God

TRADITION TEN

No A.A. group or member should ever, in such a way as to implicate A.A., express any opinion on outside controversial issues—particularly those of politics, alcohol reform, or sectarian religion. The Alcoholics Anonymous groups oppose no one. Concerning such matters they can express no views whatever.

Tradition 10 Contemplation Questions

Alcoholics Anonymous has no opinion on outside issues; hence the AA name ought never be drawn into public controversy.

1. Do I ever give the impression that there really is an "AA opinion" on Antabuse? Tranquilizers? Doctors? Psychiatrists? Churches? Hospitals? Jails? Alcohol? The federal or state government? Legalizing marijuana? Vitamins? Al-Anon? Alateen?
2. Can I honestly share my own personal experience concerning any of those without giving the impression I am stating the "AA opinion"?
3. What in AA history gave rise to our Tenth Tradition?
4. Have I had a similar experience in my own AA life?
5. What would AA be without this tradition? Where would I be?
6. Do I breach this or any of its supporting traditions in subtle, perhaps unconscious, ways?
7. How can I manifest the spirit of this tradition in my personal life outside AA? Inside AA?

57 Varieties of Self-pity

SELF-PITY SOUNDS like an unmanly defect, yet statistics show that men commit suicide ten times as often as women, and surely self-pity is well represented in that figure. Most men are quick to admit anger, rage, and resentment (sometimes seeming to equate them with some kind of backhanded virtue), and I have spent many hours listening to stories about fights, altercations, and brutal beatings. Though I am not unfamiliar with these emotions, I know I drank to drown my sorrow. In the fight for life, self-pity almost buried me.

I was sober 122 days in Alcoholics Anonymous when I went on a five-day binge following a deep personal disappointment. The morning I sobered up over coffee and a rather shaky game of endless solitaire, I knew for an absolute certainty that unless I overcame self-pity, I was destined to die drunk. I also knew that I would have to go to any length to overcome this defect if I was ever to live sober, and so I began to read, to inquire, to study, and to pray over this thing in an attempt to eradicate it from my thoughts and from my life. Though I was fifty-five years old at the time, no one had ever told me, directly, that I would have to learn to control my thoughts and not just my actions.

One day on my lunch hour, I found myself tossing a quarter to a legless beggar. Later, I thought this through. I pitied the beggar because I had good legs and he had none, and so I looked down on him physically and mentally. Moving this argument over to myself, I could see that when I pitied myself I looked down on myself: I saw myself as pitiful. And that in a nutshell was the cause of my poor self-image, my inferiority complex if you will. When I did this, I robbed myself of my God-given self-confidence, and without self-confidence, all my fears and anxieties immediately rose to the surface. I could see that allowing the self-indulgence of self-pity could turn me from a reasonably confident man to a bowl of jelly in a matter of minutes. The progression is simple: Self-pity leads to a poor self-image; a poor self-image leads to a lack of confidence; a lack of confidence allows all my fears and anxieties to surface and turn me into an emotional cripple. I believe this way of looking at self-pity, this personal understanding, was a spiritual experience.

I later discovered that self-pity is like Heinz soup: It comes in fifty-seven varieties. When I was lonesome, I was feeling sorry for myself because I was alone. When I was envious, I was feeling sorry for myself because someone had something I didn't. Overall, self-pity played a role in many other character defects, and I had to learn to recognize that role. I had to expose the impostor!

Following this illumination, I began to seek ways and means of combating what for me was a terrible mental illness. I once said to a friend that we should start a special group for people who suffered from self-pity. He replied, "Where would we hold the meetings, Rich Stadium?" (Buffalo's professional football stadium seats 85,000 people.) I found that I really had to get tough with myself. I quit playing certain records and frequenting certain places; in a nutshell, I avoided the occasions of self-pity. I burned or otherwise destroyed any memento that had the effect of making me feel sad. Self-pity was a way of romanticizing my condition, which made it easy to put the blame on others. I began to romanticize my sobriety and the inner toughness I was developing as a result of my fight with self-pity.

Over the years (there are now eight sober ones behind me), I have found that working with others (especially new people), making a herculean effort to be grateful, seeking fellowship when I want most to be alone (to lick my wounds), and reading light and exciting novels and adventure stories (if I have no choice but to be alone) have allowed me to overcome self-pity to the point where I do not have to drink.

If we are willing to recognize this defect in ourselves and admit its existence, and are willing to go to any length to overcome it, God will give us a handle on it. This overcoming will change our personalities. The me that used to drink would always drink; I had to become another person to stay sober.
